

The Winter Storm that barreled through Cherokee Country (and all of TX) this week impacted our great state exceptionally hard. It is estimated to generate billions in losses across the impacted regions of the country. For this reason, Texas A&M AgriLife Extension is reaching out to each of its County Offices to assist in assembling a sound estimation of agriculture losses in counties as a direct result to the Winter Storm.

To best serve our citizens of Texas, we have a fast turnaround for this information and the Cherokee County AgriLife Extension office is asking that you please respond by Sunday 2/21 at 10 PM. Below is a list of areas that we will be collecting potential losses for.
